SELECTED TALE

A NIGHT SCENE IN A POOR MAN'S HOUSE.

It was in the middle of winter, on the night of the 23d of January, when the weather was miserably cold, it neither decidedly froze, nor yet did it thaw, but between the two it was damp and cold, and penetrated even to the very bone of those who sat in carpeted rooms before large fires, and were warmly clad. It was on this evening that the seven children of David Baird, the weaver, stood huddled together in their small room, beside a small fire, which was burning comfortlessly. The baby lay in a cradle on one side of the hearth. The fire, to be sure, gave warmth, because it had boiled an iron pot full of potatoes. But it gave very little cheerfulness to the room. The mother had portioned out the evening meal—a few potatoes to each—and she now sat down by the table, lighted the farthing candles, and was preparing to do some little piece of housewifery.

'May I stir the fire?' asked David, the eldest boy.

'No, no,' replied the mother, 'it burns away too fast if it is stirred.'

'I wish we had a good fire,' sighed Judith, the second girl.

'Bless me!' said the mother, 'it is a good fire! Why there's Dame Grundy and her grand child gone to bed because they have no fire at all!'

'I should like to have some salt to my potatoes,' said little Bessy, 'may I have some, mother?'

'There is none, she replied, 'I put the last in the pot.'

'Oh dear,' cried out little Joe, 'my feet are so bad. They get no better, though I did beat them with holly.'

'Poor thing,' sighed the mother, 'I wish you had better shoes.'

'There's a pair,' said Joe briskly, 'at Timmy Nixon's, for fourteen-pence.'

'Fourteen-pence,' repeated the mother, 'it would take a long time to get fourteen-pence.'

'Mat. Willis begged a pair of nice warm boots,' replied Joe experimentally.

'We will not beg,' said the mother, 'if we can help it, but let me see the shoes;' and Joe put up one of his miserably frost bitten feet on his mother's knee. 'Bless them! my poor lad,' said the mother, 'thou shalt not go to work again till it is warmer.'

'Mother, interrupted little Susan, 'may I have some more?'

'There is no more,' said she, 'but I have a whole loaf yet.'

'Oh dear, O, dear, how nice,' cried the children, clapping their hands, 'and give Joe the bottom crust,' said one, 'because of his feet.'

'And give me a big bit,' cried Susan, holding a little fat hand.

The mother distributed the loaf—setting aside a piece for her husband—and presently the husband came.

'It rains, and is very cold, said he shivering.

'Please God rejoined the mother, 'it will be warmer after the rain.'

David Baird was a tall thin man, with an uneasy look—not that he had any fresh cause of uneasiness—his wages had not been lowered, his hours of work had not been increased; nor had he quarrelled with his master, but the life of a poor man is an uneasy life—a life of care, weariness, and never ending anxieties. What wonder, then, if his face have a joyless look?

The children made room for their father by the fire: Susan and Ned placed themselves between his knees, and his wife handed him the portion of supper which had been set aside for him. Mary, the eldest girl, was sitting on a box, feeding a squirrel with the bread which her mother had given her—she was very happy, and kissed the squirrel many times, Judith was sitting beside her, and David held the cup out of which the squirrel drank.

'Nobody has inquired after that squirrel,' said the father, looking at them.

'No,' replied Mary, 'and I hope nobody will.'

'They will not now,' said David, 'for it is three months since we found it.'

'We might sell it for half a crown,' said the father. Mary looked frightened, and held the squirrel to her bosom. 'Joes feet are very bad,' remarked the mother.

'And that doctors bill has never been paid,' said the father, 'seventeen shilling and six-pence.' 'Tis more money than we get in a week,' sighed the mother. 'I go round by the back lane, to avoid passing the door,' said the father, 'and he has asked me for it three times.' 'We will get it paid in the summer,' replied the mother, hopefully, 'but now coals are raised, and bread they say, will rise before the week is out.' 'Lord help us,' exclaimed the father internally. 'Mary fetch the other candle,' cried the mother, as the farthing candle burnt low in the stick, and then went out. 'There is not one,' replied Mary, 'we burnt the other last night.'

'Have you a farthing David?' asked the wife.

'Not one,' replied he, rather hastily.

'Nor have we one in the house,' said the wife, 'I paid all we had for the bread.'

'Stir up the fire then,' said David.

'Lord help us!' again sighed David, and two of the children began coughing. 'Those children's coughs are no better,' remarked the father, somewhat impatiently. And then the baby awoke, and so did Bessy, who had fallen asleep on the floor unobserved crying, 'I am cold moth er—I am so cold.'

'Go to bed with her Mary,' said the mother, 'for you were up betimes this morning; washing—put your clothes on the bed, and keep her warm.' Mary went into the little dark chamber to bed with her sister and her mother tried to hush the crying infant, David was distracted. He was cold, hungry and in gloom Eight children whom he loved were about him, but he thought of them as only born to poverty, uneasiness, and care, like himself—he felt unhappy, and grew almost angry as the baby continued to cry.

Cheer up, David, honest man! there is that ever now—coming within three streets length of thee—which shall raise thee above want forever! Cheer up, this is the last hour any of you shall want for fire—the last hour any of you shall want for candle light. Thou shalt keep thy squirrel, Mary; Bessy, thou shalt have gladness to warm thee! The doctor's bill shall be paid—but David Baird, shalt thou never again skulk by back ways to thy work to avoid an importunate creditor! Joe, thou shalt turn the wheel no longer, thou feet shalt get well in woolen stockings, and warm shoes at five shillings the pair! You shall no more want salt to your potatoes, nor shall Susan again go short of her supper! But of all things yet, you know nothing, good people; and there you sit, hopeless and comfortless, and know nothing about the relief and such splendid relief too! that even now is approaching your door. Wait little baby and thou wilt, nurse thy poor tingling feet, Joe by the fire, and muse in sadness on thy poverty, David Baird, yet a few moments longer, it can do you no harm for the good news is even now turning the corner of the street!

Knock, knock, knock! David started from his reverie. 'Some one is at the door,' said the wife, and up jumped little David. 'If it is neighbor Wood come to borrow some meal, you can get her a tea-cup full,' added the mother, as the knock was repeated more hastily. Up rose David Baird, and thinking of the apothecary's bill, opened the door reluctantly.

'Are you David Baird?' inquired the letter carrier who had knocked. 'I am said David.

'This, then, is for you; and there are twenty two pence to pay on it?' said the man, holding forth a large letter. 'Is it a summons?' cried the wife, in dismay, 'for what is. David Baird summoned?' and she rushed to the door with the baby in her arms.

'It is no summons,' replied the man, 'but a money letter I take it.'

'It is not for me,' said David, half glad to escape his liability to pay the two and twenty pence.

'But are you not David Baird, the weaver?'

'I am,' said David.

'Then,' continued the letter carrier, 'pay me the twenty-two pence; and if it is not right, they will return you the money at the post-office.'

'Twenty-two pence,' repeated David ashamed to confess his poverty,

'One shilling and two pence,' said the wife, 'we have not so much money by us, good man.'

'Light a candle,' said the letter carrier, bustling into the house, 'and hunt up what you have.'

David was pushed to an extremity, 'We have none,' said he, 'we have not money to buy a candle!'

'Lord bless me,' said the letter carrier, and gave David the younger, four pence to bring half a pound of candles. David and his wife knew not what to think, and the letter-man shook the wet from his hat. In a few moments the candles came, and the letter was put into David's hands.

'Open it, can't you?' said the letter-man.

'Is it for me?' inquired David again.

'It is,' replied the other impatiently—'what a fuss about opening a letter.'

'What is this?' exclaimed David, taking out a bill for one hundred pounds.

'O!' sighed the wife, 'if after all, it should not be for us—but read the letter David' and David read it:

Sir.—You, David Baird, weaver of—— and son of the late David Baird of Marded on Wear, lineal descendant of Sir David Baird of Monkshauton Castle, county of York, and sole heir of Sir Peter Baird of Monkshauton aforesaid, lately deceased, are requested to meet Mr Dennis solicitor at York, as soon after the receipt of this as possible. It will be necessary for you to bring your family with you, to cover travelling expenses: you will receive a bill for one hundred pounds! payable at sight. I have the honor to be. sir

Your humble servant,

J. SMITH: son Mr. Dennis.

'Sure enough,' said David Baird; 'David Baird of Marden-on-Wear, was my father.'

Oh, oh oh chuckled out little David, as he hopped about behind the group, 'a hundred pounds and a castle.'

'Heaven be praised!' ejaculated the wife, while she hugged the baby in her arms.

'And,' continued David, the great Sir, David Baird was our ancester; but we never looked for anything from him.'

'Then the letter is for you?' asked the man.

'It is. Please heaven to make us thankful for it,' said David seriously: but, continued he, you want your money.'

'No, said the letter carrier, I'll call for that to morrow.'

David Baird was again distracted, but how different were his feelings! He could have done a thousand extravagant things—he could have laughed, cried, sung leaped about, nay rolled on the floor for joy—but he did none of these—he sat calm—and looked almost grave. At length he said; 'Wife, send the children to bed; and let us talk over this good fortune.'

THE HAPPY FARMER.

His home's a cot empowered in trees
A garden filled with fruit & flow ers,
Where singing birds and humming bees
Make gay the smiling hours.
A range of meadows green and fair,
And fields which well repay his care.

With joy he greets the rising sun,
And gladly hastens to his toil,
In fancy sees the harvest won,
As covering from the mellow soil
The tiny wheat, which yet will bring
A glorious autumn offering.

The golden hours, how quick they fly!
The happy day, how soon 'tis fled
Then onward doth the farmer hie.
And finds a table neatly spread
With many a dainty which the field
A garden plot so richly yield.

The evening too is fraught with joy,
For lov'd ones cluster round him, there—
He tastes a bliss without alloy
Which e'en a king might, sigh to share.
Then seeks his couch and finds repose
Which only he who toileth knows.

The love that survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes if it has its woes, it has likewise its delights; and when the overwhelming burst of grief is calmed into the gentle tear of recollection, then the sudden anguish and convulsive agony over the ruin of all we most loved, is softened away into pensive meditation on all that was in the day of its loveliness. who would root out such a sorrow from the heart, though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gilded, yet who would exchange it even for the song of pleasure or the burth of revelry! No, there is a voice from the tomb sweet as their song; there is a remembrance of the dead to which we turn even from the charm of the living.—Irving.

CHURCH & STATE.

ANOTHER RIOT!

FROM THE IRON CITY AND CHRONICLE, OF PITTSBURG.

"Philadelphia Riots.—In another column of this morning's Chronicle, will be found an account of the late riotous proceedings in Philadelphia, which have put another black spot upon the fair fame of that magnificent city.

It is horrible to contemplate the high-handed outrages which have, from time to time, occurred in our sister city, and the determination exhibited by the rioters, to set all law, as well as humanity, at defiance.

Mobs and riots have gained such mastery in Philadelphia, that the perpetrators seem callous, and have no respect for consequences. Whether this indifference has been occasioned by a want of energy upon the part of the authorities, we cannot say. One circumstance, however, is very palpable, in cities where the authorities meet these sudden and brutal outbreaks with a determined front, fixed upon sustaining the peace of the city at all hazards, we seldom hear of a repetition of the offence.

Desperadoes have grown bold in Philadelphia, and riots may be considered but a common occurrence. The villian, after shooting down a fellow being, or dashing his brains out with some ponderous weapon, bears himself as a hero, who has just returned from the performance of some heroic action."

"Mobs and riots have gained such a mastery in Philadelphia, that the perpetrators seem callous, and have no respect for consequences." Our friend, the Editor, has certainly made a discovery, and as the same rule will apply in a collateral case, which will prove these gospel-spreaders precisely the same, and rather worse, as they profess to reclaim sinners.

The Pittsburg gentleman knows very well how Rev. Frazure acted, in Fittsburg, when he pretended to explain the Bible to a virtuous young lady belonging to his Church, and brought distress and shame upon a worthy family. It is not a fit subject for a female pen; but when a set of men under the cloak of religion are plotting against the liberty of conscience, the dearest of all human rights—clothing their efforts with every false appellation that injenuity or treachery can devise, to put down our Constitution, such men deserve no quarters. Hundreds of people recollect the trial of this miscreant, (one of a thousand perhaps, of similar crimes,) the court being crowded, and felt deeply who would not for the poor girl? compelled as she was, to give testimony upon the infamous conduct of this wily villain.

Our friend of the Iron City may likewise remember something of a certain Mr. Adams, a gentleman uncommonly gifted with divine power, his office in the church was exclusively confined to converting young ladies, whom he used to frighten almost into fits. But this story is too full of horror—finally he was detected when he reached the borders of Ohio, and well linched, so the story goes.

About to give some account of the Colleges in Pennsylvania, we cannot refrain from relating a funny story which belongs to the Pittsburg region, and something like the following:

About this time the Osage missionary paid a visit to Pittsburg, to collect "money and goods, and property of any sort, from a feather bed down to a horse-shoe, to convert the Osage Indians." The whole city was put in requisition to furnish something or another: Mechanics, merchants, manufacturers, and private citizens were all called on to contribute something, and as much money as they pleased; enough at least to purchase a boat to carry the missionary, his women, and his property. The Rev. ———, of Pittsburg, went round with the missionary to every house. From some they got one thing, and from some, another, [they had better have given it to Rev. Taylor,] till the boat was so full, there was scarcely room for people to stand on the deck. It amounted to some thousand dollars.

When about to leave the shore, Rev.—— called to them to 'stop, here is more.' 'The boat cannot take in another article—it is impossible sir; she is too heavily laden now,' said the captain. "You must take in these barrels [or boxes.]" "Can't sir." "They must go," said the priest, and actually rolled them on board; and after sailing down the river a short distance, sold them for what they could fetch, and pocketing the money, went on. But the cream is to come yet.

In the course of their calls, they stepped into a small grocery or grog-shop. The shop belonged to a very generous, free-hearted, little Irishman, if we are not mistaken, by the name of Gallagher. But no odds about the name, he is still keeping a shop in Pittsburg. The godly men say, "Well sir, what will you contribute to the mission?" "I am so poor, gentlemen, I am not able to assist you." "Oh, if you cannot give money, give a little of anything you have." "I have nothing in the world, gentlemen, that would suit you, I suspect, I have nothing but these liquors, which you see here, and I don't expect they would suit you." "Why, I d-o-n-'t k-n-o w but they m-i-g-h-t," the holy man drolled out:—"let me see, the atmosphere is very damp on the river, I d-o-n-'t k-n-o-w, but a little spirit would be preventive;'[oh the covetous wretch] "Well gentlemen, if I have anything in my line, that will suit you, you are welcome to it, make your choice, I have but little, but I do not wish to be backward.' 'Well let us see what sort you have.' The gentleman set out his decanters, hands a glass, and Mr.—— [the missionary not being a judge, he said,] pours out a glass of brandy put it to his head, takes a sip, smacks his lips, takes another sip, smacks his lips again, hold's up the glass, looks at it between him and the light, turns to his companion and says, "This is very good; we'll take three or four gallons of this:" takes up a decanter of cherry-bounce, pours out a glass, takes a pull at that, smacks his lips at it, "Better than the first." He went on tasting the man's liquors in this way, and telling him how much to put up of each, till he came to the cordial, which is said to be very luxurious, costly liquor: he took a pull,—smacked his lips twice or thrice—took another—smacked again—takes a third: "Oh, this is excellent, put us up ten gallons of this."

In the course of their tour through the city, they called on a blacksmith. The man was quite in low circumstances; they looked round the shop to see what they could devour; but saw nothing but a large chain, called a lock chain. They coveted the chain at once—were going to a new country—and would be clearing, and hauling logs, and thought the chain, if he could spare it, would be excellent. The man urged his poverty, but they urged the cause of God; and finally persuaded him him out of the chain. After securing this, Rev. ———, casting round to see what else the shop contained, espied a horseshoe lying at his feet, and picking it up, said he would like to have a pair of them; they would need horses, and of course, horses would need shoes. The man now grew displeased, said he owed money, and had already done his creditors injustice by giving them the chain, and their reverences walked off.

THE CHOLERA.

We see by the papers that this dreadful scurge of the human race has nearly disappeared from the land. Poor Cincinnati, we believe suffered more than any part of the country, in proportion to her population; may heaven preserve her from such another calamity.

It is natural to the human family to feel alarmed for their friends when the news of fire, pestilence, or other dire calamity afflicts the place of their residence; and though we sympathize with the citizens,—we know but one family in the place. Once we were well acquainted in Cincinnati, but that has been long since. The family we refer to, is that of Judge McLEAN'. Imagine our pleasure to hear they were all well and making a tour through the upper Mississippi country. But the best news of all is that the Judge remembered the poor in his absence, and left particular instructions with his agents to use the revenue arising from his rents, for the benefit of the sick and destitute! This is the true gospel. May Heaven reward him for the God-like act.

We had other friends in Missouri, who were likewise surrounded with danger; but we believe they all escaped, and with a high sense of gratitude to the great Redeemer, we hope to meet with them all at the approaching Session of the 31st Congress.

"We are much pleased to learn that Col. PRESTON, of South Carolina, who has been for several months at the mineral springs of Virginia, has returned to Columbia much improved in health, and has resumed his post as President of the College. The deep solicitude that has been so generally expressed for Mr. Preston's restoration to health will be relieved in learning that he is enabled again to give to the arduous duties of his office the attention of his polished and gifted mind."—NAT. INT.

We had been wondering at the absence of this veteran, patriot's name from the common occurrences of the day.

The Editors of the Intelligencer has doubt less spoken from their hearts, and well they may. His gigantic mind, his even temper, his classic language, and his soft melodious voice joined to his graceful attitudes on the Senate floor—won all hearts. Long may he live, the pride of his country, and the benefactor of mankind.

Hon. THOMAS BUTLER KING.

We have just had the happiness to hear of this gentlemen likewise, that he has recovered his health, and is to be with us this winter.

The rank he holds in society, joined to his talents—his modesty and the elegance of his manners, will make him a favorite wherever he goes.

The Californians will find him of more value than gold, and eminently useful in arranging the affairs of their new State. He is one of those that "do good by stealth," visits the widow, and the orphan in their distress, and keeps himself unspotted from the world."

During his long services in Congress, he was always to be found on the side where danger threatened. May he forever enjoy the favor of heaven, and the kindness of man.

DOCTOR BOMFORD,

Another protege of ours. He is a son of Col Bomford deceased, who for many years stood at the head of the ordinance Department under the government. His son a promising young man, with a fine education, and a fine person—studied medicine, received a Diploma, and commenced the practice of his profession, under flattering prospects—when lo! he suddenly disappeared.*

Now since the times have been precarious, and ill may have befallen the Doctor, we send this notice to "Fort Smith" Arkansas, where we once heard he was. Our friends there will have the goodness to attend. Mrs. R. wishes to know how she is to send Dr. B, his marble!

* Doubtless he received some appointment in the Army or Navy.

PRESIDENT QUINCY, of Boston Mass.

The remarks of this good and gifted Statesman, and Philosopher, had we no other evidence, redounds more in behalf of Gen. Taylor than the whole corps of his enemies together.

We are sorry the Intelligencer which contained the article, was snatched away by some busy-body, or we should have made some extracts from those valuable remarks to which no argument is equivalent.

The excellence of Mr. Quincy's reasoning lies in that facility with which he separates truth from falsehood, and strips the mask from off hypocrisy.

When you have anything to do, go ahead and do it A man who has the option of two roads either of which will take him to his journey's end, must not stand too long in considering which to take.

Louisville, Kentucky is said to have six hundred coffee houses within the corporation.

The Island of Cuba pays annually to the Spanish Government, in taxes, a sum nearly equal to $20,000,000.

A young lady was told by a married woman, that she had better precipitate herself off the Niagara Falls into the basin beneath, than to marry. The young lady replied—"I would if I thought I could find a husband at the bottom."

PROSPECTUS

THE FRIEND OF YOUTH

A Monthly Newspaper.

MRS. MARGARET L. BAILY, EDITOR.

The Friend of Youth will be issued on the first of every month in quarto form, eight pages on fine paper, in neat new type, and with tasteful embellishments.

Our object will be to make the paper an attractive companion for youth. While we please, we shall also aim to form their tastes. In addition to agreeable Stories, Lessons on Natural History, Descriptions of Natural Scenery, Sketches of Travel, and Notices of New Books for children, we shall converse, with them, in language adapted to their comprehension, about the important events of the present era. We know this is not usually done in such publications, but we think we do not mistake the taste or capacity of young people, when we suppose them to feel some interest in the world they live in, beyond the nursery, the school-room, and the play-ground. It shall also be our care to interest them on all great subjects connected with the well being of mankind. Freedom, Peace, and Temperance, shall receive our warm with the suffering, we hope to awaken in them a generous abhorrence of all wrong, and an earnest love and reverence for all that is just and pure, and while thus inculcating the lessons of love to man, we can not forget the supreme obligations due to the great Father and Benefactor of all.

We hope to succeed in adapting our paper to all ages of youth, so that while the elder brothers and sisters have a full share of our attention, the little ones shall not be forgotten. They are our special favorites, and shall be cared for accordingly.

To secure variety of entertainment, we have engaged as regular contributors to our columns, several well-known and distinguished writers, peculiarly qualified to minister to the wants of Youth. Among them, we are at liberty to name—T. S. Arthur and Emma D. E. N. Southworth. In short we hope to make the paper just such a "Friend" as young people will be glad to see, and sorry to part with.

As this Prospectus may reach many of the former friends and patrons of the 'Youth's Monthly Visiter,' a paper which we established and edited for nearly three years at Cincinnati, we cannot forbear expressing the great pleasure it will give us to renew our former intercourse with them. The little children who then received the 'Visitor' as a welcome guest, are now almost grown up men and women. But they will perhaps find some little brother or sister or cousin to whom they may introduce us as an old friend.

The first number will be issued on the first of November.

The terms will be—fifty cents a year for a single copy, five copies for $2, or every person forwarding us four names, with two dollars, shall be entitled to one copy gratis.

It is desirable that the names of subscribers be sent in with as little delay as possible. All [communications must be addressed to—

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

A MAMMOTH PAPER,

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, SCIRACE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

This paper contains from one-fourth to one half more than the generality of two Dollar city weeklies.

The Proprietors of the SATURDAY EVENING POST return their sincere thanks to their friends and the public for the patronage extended to them since the enlargement of their paper, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. The belief expressed in their last Prospectus, that the POST is destined to take its stand at the very head of the weekly press, is fast becoming realized. The reason of this is in a great degree, to be found in the stand the POST has always taken against the fictional literature of the day. The public have felt, in the language of the North American and United States Gazette, of this city, that "The Post has done much towards correcting the taste of the newspaper reading public."

DR TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

Most extraordinary Medicine in the World

This Extract is put in quart bottles. It is six times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranted superior to any sold. It cured diseases without vomiting, purging, sickening, or debilitating the patient.

The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other remedies is, while it eradicates disease, it invigorates the body.

IT HAS PERFORMED MORE THAN 15,000 CURES THIS YEAR.

1,000 cures of Rheumatism.
1,000 cures of Dyspepsia.
2,500 cures of General Debility and Want of Nervous Energy.

30,000 Female Complaints, and over 7,000 cures of Diseases of the Blood viz:

Ulcers, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, pimples on the face, &c., together with nervous cases of consumption liver complaint, spinal affections, &c This, we are aware, must appear incredible, but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all parts of the United States informing us of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable druggists in Newark, New Jersey, informs us that he can refer to more than one hundred and fifty cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of N. York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character well known.

OPINIONS OF PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Townsend is almost daily receiving orders from physicians in different parts of the Union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned physicians of the city of Albany, have eimnerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla and beleive to be one of the most valuble preparations of Sarparilla in the Market.

P H. Pulinz, M. D, R. B. Briggs, M. D.
P E. Elmendorf, M. D.

Albany, April 1, 1845.

The following is from one of the most respectable physicians on Long Island:

GREENPORT July 19, 1846.

Dr. Townsend—Dear Sir—it in with satisfaction that I have recently witnessed, in several cases the most beneficial results from your extract of Sarsaparilla. Be engaged in the practice of medicine, I have prescribed it in several cases, and never without benefit. In the removal of diseases arising from a deranged state of the digestive organs, jaundice, &c if far exceeds any thing of the kind ever offered to the public. You will please send me two dozen, &c.

Respectfully yours;
C. S. PRESTON, M D.

UNITED STATES OFFICER.

Capt G W Mclean, Member of the Legislature, and late of the U. S. Navy; has kindly sent us the following certificate. It tells its own story.

RAHWAY Jan. 25 1847,

A year since I was taken with the influenza and my whole system left in a debilitated state. I was induced to try Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla,

B after taking two or three bottles, I was very much relieved, and attributed it entirely to the said Sarsaparilla. I have continued taking it, and that I improve every day. I believe it saved my life, and would not be without it under any consideration.

G W. McLEAN.

SCROFULA CURED.

This certificate conclusively proves that this Sarsaparilla has perfect control over the most obstinate diseases of the blood. Three persons cured in one house is unprecedented,

THREE CHILDREN.

Dr. Townsend—Dear Sir, I have the pleasure to inform you that three of my children have been cured of the scrofula by the use of your excellent medecine. They were afflicted very severely with bad sores; having taken only four bottles; it took them away, for which I feel myself under deep obligation.

yours respectfully,
ISAAC W. CRAIN, 108 Woost

THE GLOBE,

Congressional, Agricultural, and Literary Newspaper.

The Editors of the Congressional Globe propose a new publication. To deserve the patronage which Congress has accorded to their reports of its debates, in receiving and making the Globe the official register, they intend to add promptitude to whatever merit has hitherto recommended the work. They will publish a Daily Globe, to record the proceedings and debates as they occur, and a Congressional Globe periodically as heretofore, embodying the reports of Congress separate from the miscellaneous matter which will accompany them in the daily print. To fill the sheet of the daily newspaper, it is designed to gather the news from all quarters, and complete the contents by drawing from every source whatever may be of most interest among literary novelties, and of greatest utility in science, art, or agriculture. For material the leading journals and periodicals of France and Great Britain, treating of such subjects will be consulted and it is hoped, advantageously used. Original essays, especially on topics connected with agriculture, will be obtained from the most enlightened and practical men of our country.

The Globe as a newspaper, and as a vehicle of information and amusement in other respects will be under the charge of Francis P. Blair and James C. Pickett.

The Congressional department and business concerns of the paper will be under the management of John C. Rives. The public are familiar with Blair and Rives as connected with the press. In introducing Mr Pickett as one of the conceren they will be allowed to say a few words of him. He is a gentleman favorably known to the Government, for the talent and judgment which distinguished his diplomatic service while connected with the mission to Quito, and more recently when Charge d'Affaires to Peru. From him mainly the Globe will derive the selections and translations from the foreign continental journals and periodicals, the comments on them and the other literary articles which will be found among its chief attractions. F. P. Blair will give his attention principally to the English periodicals.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress and weekly the balance of the year and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain agricultural and miscellaneous articles.

The Congressional Globe will embody as it has done for the last sixteen years, Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively.

The Appendix will embrace the revised speeches separately and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first four weeks of a session and two or three numbers of each a week afterwards, until the end of the session.

Complete indexes to the Congressional Globe and appendix, will be sent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Daily Globe daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess, a year, $5 00

For one copy of the Weekly Globe for one year, 2 00

For one copy of the Congressional Globe during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 50

For one copy of the Appendix during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 50

For six copies of either the Congressional Globe or the appendix, or part of both, 5 00

The subscription for the Congressional Globe or the Appendix after the 10th of January will be $1 50. The original price of one dollar does not pay the expense of the publications in consequence of the great increase of matter published

BETTER AND CHEAPER THAN EVER !!!

NEVER IN THE FEAR!!!

A NEW PAPER MAMMOTH SIZE

Reduced price, Increased Beauty.

AND ACCUMULATED INTEREST!!

The undersigned having purchased the disputed claim on the old Saturday Courier, and being determined not to be surpassed in the competition among the press For popularity beauty and excellence, will now combine the unrivaled and unapproachable material of the old paper, with the renewed energy enterprise novelty and spirit of a new one and will issue, on the 11th day of March, 1848 in the city of Philadelphia the first number of a new weekly Newspaper, of the very first and largest class, entitled

M'MAKIN'S MODEL,

AMERICAN COURIER

Published and edited by ANDREW M'MAKIN, now editor of the Saturday Courier.

Assisted by a gentleman, universally acknowledged as one of the most talented and popular writers of the age.

The farmers Department, of the Courier will be edited. It is expected, by the most distinguished Agriculturist in the united States whose name will be announced as soon as the pending negotiations are contemplated.

THE AMERICAN COURIER

Will contain the amount of eight more columns of matter than does the "Saturday Courier," and it will be conducted strictly on the Cash Principal, will, with all its Artistic and literary improvements, be offered at a much reduced price to "Clubs,"

The editor of the American courier feels confident that not a pledge will be required of time to the character of the new paper, other than that it will be a family newspaper, neutral in politics and religion; chaste in morality and moderate but elevated in tone and sentiment. His long connection with the "Saturday courier,"—which, under at least his co editorship, reached the largest similar circulation in the world,—will be ample pledge that every intelligent and respectable family in the land may safely confide in his taste, judgment and energy, with the aid of comparatively unlimited capital, to cater for their mental appetite

The contents of the American Courier.

Among the standard features of the american courier, will be—a new series of 'Washington Legends,' by George Lippard, esq. The 'portrait Gallery' of poets and their poetry—each Biography illustrated, Original domestic tales, by the most distinguished writers of the day. Original essays, sketches, poems, and letters on useful and important subjects. Engraved views of persons, scenes and things of interest Select tales from the best english and american authors. The "Modern Spectator, in wich it will be designed to

"eye nature's walk, shoot Folly as it flies

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE PLOUGH LOOM, AND ANVIL.

POPULAR as the journal is, and so far successful beyond any heretofore established, its income is yet something short of paying its own expenses, leaving the editors to live on air or hope, neither of which is very substantial diet. Now, as we believe that we have not a friend who would willingly see the man want bread who has been more than thirty years teaching others how to make it, we at once frankly solicit our present patrons to use their influence to average one more subscriber each, and then "the Plough, the Loom, and the Anvil," and those who are working at it, will be doing what is commonly called a safe business, and not until then. We are truly sorry to be under the necessity of making this appeal, for, could we afford it, we would rejoice, as on past occasions, to show that we would most willingly work as hard, gratuitously for the great industrial interests of the country, as we are now doing in the hope of at least a scanty support.

P. S. We shall not fail to note the favor if any kind brother Editor should give this a place in his paper to help along one of the oldest of the fraternity.
